MONKEY BUSINESS

The king of the Hula Hula Island was having a days outing. A whole program was prepared and given in his honor. Some said that the old king and his natives were just about two jumps in the Darwin chain, but the truth of the matter was he was still hanging by his tail. The king expressed mild enthusiasm about Prof. Blackmonks jazz orchestra. Just then Matilda, the charming snake dancer, started to strut her stuff. The old "kink" was all eyes, in fact he even stepped down from his soap box throne and tried to dance with her but, her twists and twirls were too fast and snappy so the dizzy "kink" staggered back to his throne.

The rest of the thrilling events which took up many happy hours were a total loss to the king. About the middle of the afternoon the king looked around and rubbed his eyes--Ah!"THE TILLY GIRLS" were going to dance. The king snaps right out of it right off. He is all enthusiasm and applause. The crowning glory of the event was when the wife, the queen, steps in with the rolling pin and drags the dizzy king home to their palatial coconut tree. The king says: "A Womans Place Is The Home".
